WORLD WAR I-Return of WWI Dead

More than one-half of the American servicemen who died in Europe and surrounding waters were returned to the United States for final burial. Nearly 46,000 bodies arrived between Oct 1920 and Mar 1922 under a special program of the Graves Registration Service, U.S. Army Quartermaster Corps. Hoboken, NJ, in the New York Port of Embarkation complex, served as port of arrival for all the returning transports. From there, the bodies went to the military or private cemetery designated by the next-of-kin. These sources do not indicate that remains returned in any arrangement by unit affiliation. Each body, it appears, returned on an individual basis and any grouping by unit was probably coincidental. See:
