-Military Family Law, 19th Century

An extensive search uncovered very few direct references to military families. Cursory information on marriage, wives, and children was found in the following:

De Hart, William C. Observations on Military Law and the Constitution and Practice of Courts Martial... NY: Appleton, 1862. pp. 22-27. UB853.D45.

Regan, James. The Judge Advocate and Recorder's Guide. Wash, DC: Berksford, 1877. pp. 166-69. UB853.R4.

U.S. Army Regulations regulated wives and children to an ambiguous legal status, similar to that of camp followers. Those laundresses who were wives of soldiers, however, were an exception, as seen in Army Regulations 1881, Sec 1240. See also our bibliography on laundresses (in Women). Army Regulations explicitly covered the subject of marriage for enlisted men, preferring them single, at least at the time of their initial entry into service. Possession of wife or child blocked enlistment throughout the late 19th century, and re-enlistment with dependents required special permission from the Adjutant General's Office, at least after 1881. (See Army Regulations 1863, Paragraphs 930 & 932; 1881, Paragraphs 759 & 764; and 1889, Paragraphs 914-915.)

Indexes to War Department General Orders and Circulars issued during the latter half of the 19th century reveal practically no subject headings concerning families, wives, or children until the late 1890s. One minor exception was Circular 6, dated 10 Aug 1883, which terminated rights of married soldiers to separate quarters. Another exception was medical care provided to military families. Perhaps a pattern of emerging concern for the health of the wives and children can be traced in the following orders and circular: General Order 15, 1882; GO 65, 1884; Circular 1, 1885; and GO 38, 1890.

Additional sources worth examination are Annual Reports of the Secretary of War, which contain occasional reports from the Commanding General, Dept of California. For example, Brigadier General Thomas H. Ruger's report in the Annual Report, 1892, Vol. I, pp. 104-06. Incidentally, it was noted in these Annual Reports that beginning in 1887 the Surgeon General reported on the health of "civilians attached to or with the Army" and included counts of all the civilians and, more significantly, the numbers of marriages of officers and enlisted men. See the Surgeon General's reports in Annual Report 1887, pp. 652-655; 1890, pp. 922-23; and 1892, pp. 499-500. Although such data alone does not relate directly to military family law, it provides a rare, statistical glimpse of Army social history.

-Survivor Benefits, WWII

Provisions for dependents of soldiers were standard, regardless of whether they enlisted or were drafted. Provisions included pay allotments (deducted from soldier pay & sent directly to dependents), a death gratuity (six month' pay to survivors), eligibility for low-cost government life insurance, and paid burial expenses. Appointing an officer "to assist in notification of emergency addressees, or to offer them comfort, assistance, or advice on Government benefits" can be traced back to at least 1951. (See Special Regulation 600-400-10, Sep 1951, Para 1c). Survivor assistance policy since then can be traced in pertinent regulations, namely:
