NOTE: The term "National Guard" steeped from the Marquis de Lafayette, who used it to designate the revolutionary forces he commanded in France during the 1790s. He later applied this term to American organized militia during his 1824 visit to the U.S. Henceforth the term became popular. The 2d Bn/11th NY Arty first adopted the title and, later, New York State so designated all its Civil War militia. By 1896, according to John Mahon's History of National Guard and Militia, p. 110, only 3 states did not use the term. In 1916, the National Defense Act designated all state militia as National Guard.
